

DESIGN LINES 4 - MARCH 2015

Building Presidential Style Homes

Welcome to the March edition of Design Lines! The first few months of 2015 have flown by, and with Easter just around the corner, our team has been busy quoting, designing and building some great new homes.

In this edition of Design Lines we show you a Cape Cod-style home, which recently featured in QLD Home Design & Living Magazine. We also look at the psychology of colour - do you prefer blues or earthy colours on or in your home?

The next few months are shaping up to be very busy months with a number of great new projects planned. I look forward to showing you through our new developments in our next newsletter.

Don't forget to follow us on Facebook and Pinterest for our latest project news.

All the best,

Garth

What Hue are You?

Have you ever wondered what the colour of your home says about you and your personality? Components of colour psychology suggests that the chosen colour for the walls within your home can help to create an emotionally healthy home. Do you have a blue home? If so, you are promoting a harmonious and stable atmosphere. If your home displays rich earthy colours you are industrious and purposeful in design! Visit our Pinterest page to explore our home colour pinboard to find out more about this phenomenon.

Colourful Homework

It's important that the materials you choose suit the character and design of your house. Read this great ColorBond article on colour matching.

Here Come the Americans

Traditional Queenslanders Managing Director, Stephen Havas recently spoke to QLD Home Design & Living magazine about the architecturally inspiring design elements of a traditional American colonial-style home. In this interview, Stephen discusses why this style is so popular among homeowners, and why they will embrace this style for many years to come.
